

Facilities for staff

The University really does have all the amenities of a small town, which means that our staff have access to a vast range of facilities to support them throughout their time at Birmingham.

We have an ongoing commitment to invest in projects that enhance both the learning experience and quality of life of our students and staff, and this includes investing in our facilities.

Our current major redevelopment is our new music auditorium, which will complete the redbrick semi-circle of buildings that have been at the heart of the University since 1909. The multi-million pound project will include a 450-seat concert hall that will provide the most flexible performance space at a UK university, ideal for staging everything from community concerts to international artists.
