

LLB Law with German Law

This course is a four-year degree involving a year abroad at a German university in either Berlin or Bayreuth. Students on this programme will familiarise themselves with both Civil Law and Common Law, thereby gaining comparative experience of two of the world's major legal families. Any student hoping for a career in international law, commerce or business will find their opportunities significantly enriched by this programme. Approximately two-thirds of your time will be spent on English law and one-third on German and German Law.

Birmingham Law School is the most established law school in one of the largest legal communities in the country. For over 85 years we have made a major contribution to teaching and scholarship, and you'll learn from academics who are leaders in their fields and the authors of many key works used by practitioners today.

Details

The German legal system belongs to the continental European family of legal systems known as Civil Law. The characteristic feature of Civil Law countries is the importance they attach to codified abstract rules. The Civil Law tradition has had a major influence on the design and development of the law of the European Union. By contrast, England is the home of one of the world's other great legal families, that of the Common Law, a family which also embraces many nations outside Europe including the USA. The special characteristic of the Common Law is the importance it attaches to decisions of the courts. During the course you will familiarise yourself with both legal systems, thereby gaining comparative experience of two of the world's major legal families. Any student hoping for a career in international law, commerce or business will find their opportunities significantly enriched by this programme.

Law modules are taught by Birmingham Law School, and the German modules by the Department of German Studies – one of the very best in the UK. Approximately two-thirds of your time will be spent on English law and one-third on German and German Law.

Modules

First year

We assume that you have no prior knowledge of the law, so the programme starts with lectures and discussion groups on the legal system, legal sources and methods of reasoning. You then study 80 credits of law modules (Public Law \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-public-law.aspx\), Law of Contract \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-law-of-contract.aspx\), Law of Torts \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-law-of-torts.aspx\)), together with an introduction to German law and the German legal system, plus a German language module.

Second year

In this year you again study 80 credits of law modules (Legal Foundations of the European Union \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-legal-foundations-of-the-eu.aspx\), Land Law \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-land-law.aspx\), Law of Trusts and Equity \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-law-of-trusts-and-equity.aspx\)), as well as modules on German law and German language.

Third year

You spend this year living in Germany and studying at either Bayreuth University or Freie Universität in Berlin alongside German law students. You are given help to select appropriate subjects and tailor tuition to your specific needs and interests. On successful completion of the year, you will be awarded a graded certificate by the German university.

The year abroad pushed me academically, developing my ability in German and gaining an understanding of a significant European legal system. But most importantly, studying Law with German allowed me to stand out from the rest when applying to law firms. (Joseph Kamyar, 2011 Graduate)

Fourth year

In your final year back in Birmingham, you study the compulsory Criminal Law \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-criminal-law.aspx\) and German language modules. You also choose 60 credits of options in the Law School and either one module from the Department of German Studies or write a dissertation on an aspect of German Law.

Modules normally available include:

- Advanced EU Law \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-advanced-eu-law.aspx\)
- Advanced Law of Torts \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-advanced-law-of-torts.aspx\)
- Advanced Property Law \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-advanced-property-law.aspx\)
- Advocacy \(Mooting\) \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/modules/l1b-mooting.aspx\)

Key Information Set (KIS)

Key Information Sets (KIS) are comparable sets of information about full- or part-time undergraduate courses and are designed to meet the information needs of prospective students.

All KIS information has been published on the Unistats website and can also be accessed via the small advert, or 'widget', below. On the Unistats website (<http://unistats.direct.gov.uk>) you are able to compare all the KIS data for each course with data for other courses.

The development of Key Information Sets (KIS) formed part of HEFCE's work to enhance the information that is available about higher education. They give you access to reliable and comparable information in order to help you make informed decisions about what and where to study.

The KIS contains information which prospective students have identified as useful, such as student satisfaction, graduate outcomes, learning and teaching activities, assessment methods, tuition fees and student finance, accommodation and professional accreditation.

Learning and teaching

As a Birmingham student, you are joining the academic elite and have the privilege of learning from world-leading experts in their fields. Learning here at the Law School is research-led, drawing upon the expertise of staff to provide excellent teaching. We regard teaching and research as inextricably linked and mutually reinforcing. Our staff are frequent participants in legal debates and contribute regularly to the policy-making process.

Our teaching reflects original thought and insight which has helped to shape the contours of the discipline of law. Respondents to the National Student Survey have acknowledged the enthusiasm of our staff and their ability to explain things clearly and make material intellectually stimulating. We encourage all our students to challenge us and draw their own conclusions.

Central to Learning and Teaching in the Law School at the University of Birmingham is critical enquiry, debate and self-motivation, summed up by the term enquiry-based learning.

Enquiry-based learning describes an environment in which learning is driven by the shared enquiry of students and tutors. This approach will enable you to take control of your own learning as you progress through your degree. Moreover, it will encourage you to acquire essential skills that are highly valued in the competitive employment sector: creativity, independence, team-working, goal-setting and problem-solving. Enquiry-based learning places you at the centre of your own learning process so that you learn through involvement and ownership and not simply by listening.

What you can expect?

Throughout your Law degree you can expect about 13 hours of contact time per week made up of approximately ten hours of lectures and three hours of seminars. During your first year you will undergo a formal transition review to see how you are getting on and offer you help for any particular areas where you need support.

Lectures

Lectures are an important method of teaching used in the School, intended to provide a structured framework for learning and dispensing essential knowledge. They won't tell you all you need to know, but they should help you to navigate the reading you're expected to undertake to pursue your studies effectively. A good lecture can be an eye-opening and mind-broadening experience.

Seminars

Seminars are smaller group classes, which involve the development and testing of ideas in discussion, with a high degree of student input. A successful class is one in which the module teacher says very little, intervening only to comment, steer and occasionally inform or correct.

Seminars are not 'mini-lectures'. In all seminars you are expected to be prepared and to participate. They provide a forum for discussion and exchange of ideas, and all students are expected to be able to participate actively. This is tremendously important at university level and will help you to clarify and extend your understanding of the topics you are studying, as well as develop confidence in expressing yourself orally.

Seminars in law also provide an opportunity to learn the difficult but vital skill of applying the law to factual situations. This is assessed in exams through 'problem questions'. For your seminars directed to this skill you will be given the facts of problem questions in advance, and you devote time to working out your own answers beforehand, then testing those answers in argument during the seminar.

Assessment methods

Birmingham Law School uses a variety of methods to assess student performance, this includes exams, essays and dissertations. At the beginning of each module, you'll be given information on how and when you'll be assessed for that particular programme of study.

- Examinations take place in the summer term (May/June) and core modules are typically assessed by a 3-hour exam with optional modules assessed by a 2-hour exam. There are no January exams at Birmingham Law School.
- Essays vary in length (1000-4000 words) depending on whether the essay is only part of the assessment for the subject or whether the subject is assessed 100% by essay.
- Dissertations are individual research projects into a specific topic and vary in length (up to 10,000 words) depending on the credit value of the subject which is being assessed by dissertation.

A number of prizes are available for outstanding performance in assessments at the end of each academic year. Many of these prizes are sponsored by law firms across the UK.

Studying at degree-level is likely to be very different from your previous experience of learning and teaching. You will be expected to think, discuss and engage critically with the subject and find things out for yourself. We will enable you to make this transition to a new style of learning, and the way that you are assessed during your studies will help you develop the essential skills you need to make a success of your time at Birmingham.

Feedback

Developing skills and enhancing academic performance is a key part of a university education and the Law School provide feedback on your work throughout your degree. You'll receive feedback on each assessment within four weeks, so that you can learn from and build on what you have done. To enhance the student learning experience, the Law School provides the following:

- Individual feedback on academic performance is provided during progress review meetings with your personal tutor throughout the year.
- All academic members of staff will have feedback and office hours during which you can see them without prior appointment and speak to them on a 1-1 basis to discuss feedback or other academic support you may require.
- Individual feedback on both assessed and non-assessed essays within four weeks of submission. This feedback will cover
  - What was done well
  - What was not done well
  - How the above relate to the mark achieved and the marking criteria
  - What could be done to improve the next piece of work.
- Generic feedback on examination papers will be offered to students following the publication of results in June each year.
- In addition to generic feedback, individual feedback is offered to all students who have failed and are entitled to re-sit the examination.

Legal Skills Advisory Service (LSAS)

In addition to the feedback you will receive from academic staff, our Legal Skills Advisory Service will help you develop skills particular to studying law. We run daily drop-in sessions and weekly workshops open to all undergraduate Law students. LSAS will help you to develop skills which are crucial to legal study. Workshops include:

- How to prepare for seminars and lectures
- How to answer essay and problem questions
- How to read cases and articles
- How to learn from feedback and tackling common mistakes
- How to manage your time effectively
- How to prepare for exams

Employability

Birmingham Law School's Centre for Professional Legal Education and Research (CEPLER) provides a diverse range of opportunities and activities to enhance knowledge, skills, confidence and employability - all the things that help graduates to stand out from the crowd in a competitive jobs market.

Our students can benefit from activities, opportunities, help and resources in areas including:

Careers

- CEPLER's extensive provision of careers lectures and skills workshops offers advice and guidance on a range of specialist areas of law and legally-related careers. In addition to practical skills sessions on how to present yourself and succeed at interview. View information on our careers lectures provision \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/careers/careers-lectures.aspx\). Or to find out about other careers activities. \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/careers/law-careers-events.aspx\)
- We are forging links right across the legal community and beyond to public, third sector and non-law commercial organisations to provide valuable work experience placements \(/schools/law/courses/l1b/careers/work-experience-placements.aspx\).

Pro Bono

- CEPLER's Pro Bono Group began in 2009 and has grown from one Street Law Project to a diverse portfolio of opportunities to build your experience and serve the community. Visit the Pro Bono Group \(/schools/law/life/pro-bono/index.aspx\) page for full details on the range of projects.

Mooting & Advocacy

- Being able to evidence your experience of advocacy is a key advantage in the over-subscribed legal profession. CEPLER offers skills sessions and three Mooting competitions \(/schools/law/life/mooting.aspx\), as well as Debating and Negotiation.

Education

- CEPLER is developing new and innovative approaches to teaching to give you experience of real world law. So far, we have introduced two new practice-based modules: Regulation of the Legal Profession, which will encourage you to question assumptions about lawyers and their role in society; and Advocacy, which covers a range of skills such as mooting, negotiation and mediation, along with court observations and presentation skills development.

Professional accreditation

This degree is a 'qualifying' degree; this means that it provides exemption from the first or academic stage of the examinations required by the Solicitors Regulation Authority and Bar Standards Board before you can qualify as a solicitor or barrister.

Barristers

In order to practise in England and Wales the intending barrister must first join an Inn of Court. Many students do this while taking their degree. The School has its own Inns of Court Students' Association from which details can be obtained about joining an Inn. On successful completion of the degree intending barristers must take a further one-year full-time course, the Bar Professional Training Course leading to the second part of the Bar examination. There then follows a one-year period of Pupillage – a form of apprenticeship in a barrister's chambers.

Solicitors

On completion of their degree intending solicitors take a one-year full-time course. This is called the Legal Practice Course (LPC). Thereafter, there is a two-year training contract (apprenticeship in a firm of solicitors), all or most of which must be taken after completing the LPC. Fuller information on both the Bar and the Solicitors' professions is given in the Law School Handbook. The official bodies, from which complete particulars should be sought, are as follows:
