

Circles of Influence

Circles of Influence, the University's innovative fundraising campaign is helping to develop a campus for the 21st century. Through the generous support of our alumni, friends and charitable trusts, previous development projects have included the award-winning Bramall Music Building, and major renovation of our Medical School. The second phase of the campaign will help to deliver the transformation of our Edgbaston campus for the benefit of students, staff and the wider community, including a new sports centre, new library and the Institute of Translational Medicine.

Circles of Influence (alumni/giving/index.aspx) also supports research that saves the lives of children and adults in the West Midlands and around the world; and funds scholarships that open the University to talented young people who might otherwise feel university is not for them. For more information about how you can support any of these projects through Circles of Influence, please contact Mark Clayton (<mailto:m.clayton.1@bham.ac.uk>), Circles of Influence Project Officer.
