Tarsem Singh Cooner presents - Exploring Personal and Professional Boundaries in a Networked Society: Using Facebook as a Site for Learning

This session will outline how Facebook was used to help students consider issues of boundaries in social networking environments.

An enquiry-based blended learning approach will be introduced demonstrating how closed Facebook groups can be used to help students explore:

- information publicly available about them
- the messages that information conveys
- whether social networking sites can be used for continuing professional development

<> Come along to this session to find out about and discuss how social media can be integrated into existing teaching to explore issues relevant to a networked society.
