

University of Birmingham School

In September 2015 the University of Birmingham School will open to form an exciting new addition to education in Birmingham. At the University of Birmingham School we aim to transform lives by creating a learning community that will utilise the wonderful facilities of a new building and exploit its close association with the University to provide an unrivalled educational experience for all of its pupils. The School, which will be free to attend, seeks to bring pupils together from different social and cultural backgrounds to create an environment that reflects the diversity of Birmingham and provides opportunities for everyone to excel.
