Edited by John R. Bryson, Professor of Enterprise and Economic Geography, School of Geography, Earth and Environmental Sciences, The University of Birmingham, UK and Distinguished Research Fellow, Foundation for Research in Economics and Business Administration (SNF), Bergen, Norway and Peter W. Daniels, Professor of Geography and Dean of Physical Services and Engineering, School of Geography, Earth and Environmental Sciences, The University of Birmingham, UK

Service activities of all kinds are now acknowledged as key players in economic development, societal change, and policy-making worldwide. This exciting new Handbook helps to clarify ongoing conceptual debates about the nature of service-led economies and push back the frontiers of current critical thinking and research agendas on the role and impact of service activities at a variety of scales. Leading international scholars, from a number of disciplines, who have actively raised awareness and provoked debates about the opportunities and challenges posed by the shift to service employment have prepared original and stimulating essays.
