

Invisible Fathers

A study exploring the pilot of Mellow Dads Parenting Programme in Her Majesty's Prison Oakwood.

Jessica Langston
University of Birmingham

The Invisible Fathers Project

The background

How we progressed

What we did

What we found

Moving forward

Background

- Problematic stereotypes of fathers
- Professionals informed by personal experiences
- Excluded from services
- Children experiencing disadvantage
- 39% less likely to reoffend when linked with family
- 45% of fathers lose touch with their families

How the study progressed

- Being heard
- Measured outcomes
- Mixed Methods
- Study A
 - Peer researchers
 - Partnership
- Study B
 - Existing measures

Study A – a participatory approach

- Legitimate fatherhood
- Course environment

Study B – measuring outcomes

- 7 out of 7 reported thinking differently about the need for change
- 7 out of 7 reported changes to parenting style
- 6 out of 7 reported changes in how they understood their role

Findings

- Nature of the father-child relationship
 - Legitimate fatherhood
 - Changes to parenting style
- Not more visits
- Nurturing environment

Recommendations

- Partnership continues
- Earlier in the prison journey
 - Links with local courts
- Mellow Mums
- After Mellow
 - Visits
 - Environment

