

ISIRC 2012

4th International Social Innovation Research Conference
University of Birmingham, 12-14 September 2012

Welcome to ISIRC 2012, the 4th International Social Innovation Research Conference. ISIRC has its roots in the Social Enterprise Research Conference first held at the Open University in 2004. This was one of the first conferences I presented at as a PhD student, and I was immediately made to feel welcome by more established academics in the field. Since then ISIRC has grown significantly following the merger with the International Social Entrepreneurship Research Conference in 2009. We are delighted that the Third Sector Research Centre at the University of Birmingham has been selected to host ISIRC 2012.

Thanks to the hard work of the different stream organisers, the sponsorship of Emerald and the Policy Press, and the support of our various partner organisations the conference this year has an exciting mix of international experts and early career researchers. I would like to welcome our plenary speakers, Dennis Young; Florentine Maier, Paul Tracey, Graham Smith, Pascal Dey and Alex Nicholls to Birmingham. I hope even as the conference grows and attracts an increasingly international audience, ISIRC is still able to offer a warm welcome to all of you, particularly PhD students presenting for the first time. Please approach myself or the different stream organisers if you have any questions about the conference. Third Sector Research Centre staff are available to answer any questions about the University or the work of the Research Centre. We hope that you all enjoy the conference and your time in Birmingham.

Best wishes,

Simon Teasdale, Third Sector Research Centre, University of Birmingham.

Plenary speakers profiles

Pascal Dey is senior researcher at the University of St. Gallen and an Honorary Fellow at the Third Sector Research Centre. In his interdisciplinary research on social entrepreneurship, he has focused particularly on the interplay between discourse, power and subjectivity, thus inquiring both the limiting effects of discourse as well as how practitioners transgress, punctuate or openly oppose existing power relations. Pascal's most recent interest lies in the sociology of flows and how it can be used to conceptualize social innovation and change as the result of socio-material ordering practices.

Florentine Maier is assistant professor at the Nonprofit Management Group at WU Vienna University of Economics and Business. Her research areas are the managerialization of NPOs, social entrepreneurship, and alternative forms of organizing.

She holds a doctoral degree in personnel management and organizational behavior and a master's degree in international business studies and Chinese language from WU. She also studied Chinese language and culture at Vienna University and Sun Yat-Sen University (PRC). In 2009 she served as Fulbright Visiting Scholar at Stanford University.

Her research has been published in 'Voluntas', 'Business Research', and numerous book chapters.

Dr Alex Nicholls MBA is the first tenured lecturer in social entrepreneurship appointed at the University of Oxford in 2004. To date Nicholls has published more than forty papers, chapters and articles and five books. Most appear in a wide range of peer reviewed journals and books, including four sole authored papers in Financial Times Top 30 journals (with another under review and resubmit). His 2009 paper on social investment won the Best Paper Award (Entrepreneurship) at the British Academy of Management. In 2010, Nicholls edited a Special Edition of Entrepreneurship, Theory and Practice on social entrepreneurship – the first time a top tier management journal had recognized the topic in this way. He is the General Editor of the Skoll Working Papers series and the Editor of the Journal of Social Entrepreneurship. Nicholls is also the co-author of a major research book on Fair Trade (with Charlotte Opal, Sage, 2005) and the editor of a collection of key papers on social entrepreneurship (Oxford University Press, 2006, 2008). Both represent the best selling and most cited academic books on their subjects globally. In 2011, Nicholls published a co-edited volume on social innovation. In 2012, he will publish a co-edited volume on social investment, a co-authored book on social impact measurement, and a monograph on the politics of social entrepreneurship.

Graham Smith is Professor of Politics at the University of Southampton (soon to move to Centre for the Study of Democracy, University of Westminster) and the Third Sector Research Centre (TSRC). He is author of Democratic Innovations: Designing Institutions for Citizen Participation (CUP, 2009) amongst a number of other books and essays on aspects of democratic theory and practice, the social economy and environmental politics.

Paul Tracey is Reader in Human Resources and Organizations at the University of Cambridge Judge Business School. He currently holds an Economic and Social Research Council Mid-career Fellowship. Much of Paul's research is concerned with the relationship between entrepreneurship and institutions, with a particular focus on social entrepreneurship. He has published widely, including papers in Academy of Management Annals, Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, and Organization Science. He also has extensive experience of teaching social entrepreneurship and social innovation on undergraduate, masters and MBA programmes.

Dennis R. Young is Bernard B. and Eugenia A. Ramsey Professor of Private Enterprise and Director of the Nonprofit Studies Program at the Andrew Young School of Policy Studies at Georgia State University. He is founding editor of the journal Nonprofit Policy Forum, and author of numerous research papers. His books include Financing Nonprofits: Putting Theory into Practice (2007) and Handbook of Research on Nonprofit Economics and Management (2010).

Reconstructing Social Enterprise: An ESRC Seminar Series

Event 1: Toward an Ideology Critique of Social Entrepreneurship, Northampton University, November 12, 2012

Early academic research into SE derived largely from business schools and was mainly descriptive. A common format was the use of selective case study evidence to “demonstrate” the potential of this ‘new’ organisational form, and powerful stories of heroic individuals seeking to change social systems abounded. More theoretically informed work sought to explain the emergence of SE as a distinct organisational form. However, SE remains a contested concept as different authors keep using different theories to explain different entities. Though most academic work refers to the transformative potential of SE, empirical evidence supporting (or denying) such claims is notably absent. As a result, there are doubts over whether SE research depicts social reality or whether it merely mimics the politicised climate of which it is part. Aspiring to develop alternative bodies of knowledge and modes of practice, we are holding five seminars which challenge, in different ways, the current orthodoxy that SE is primarily to be seen as a value-neutral technology for solving social problems. Conceiving of critique not as negativity but as affirmative action aimed at advancing the object of inquiry, the first two seminars are devoted to deconstructive reflexivity calling into question the ostensible “naturalness” of SE. The third and fourth seminars will then be devoted to reconstructive reflexivity, addressing how the trajectory of SE can be changed via the incorporation of alternative paradigms, perspectives and values. The final seminar aims to give voice to practitioners through engaging with them in an open space format to begin to develop a SE future research agenda.

Northampton University is delighted to be hosting the first in this seminar series: Toward an Ideology Critique of Social Entrepreneurship. This seminar aims to develop understanding of the political and ideological framing of Social Enterprise and Social Entrepreneurship. Keynote speakers include Pascal Dey and Chris Steyaert (University of St. Gallen) and Alex Nicholls (University of Oxford). There will also be presentations from practitioners and PhD students.

For further details please contact Alex Nicholls (Alex.Nicholls@sbs.ox.ac.uk) or Simon Teasdale (s.teasdale@bham.ac.uk).

International Journal of Public Sector Management

Special issue: Social innovation and public services in an era of austerity

Guest Editors: Dr Simon Teasdale, Dr Pascal Dey, Prof. Alex Murdock and Dr Alex Nicholls

This call for papers is for a special issue of International Journal of Public Sector Management to be published in 2014. The following questions serve as a guide but are, of course, not exclusive:

1. How are the politics of social innovation linked to market liberal discourses pertaining to a need to shrink the state?
2. Which theories help explain the relationship between the state, social innovation and the third sector?
3. Is social innovation exclusively the property of non-state actors?
4. How might governments foster (different forms of) social innovation?
5. How far can strategies of resistance and opposition generate social innovation?
6. What particular forms of social innovation are emerging as a response to the financial crisis and the associated cuts in public services expenditures and what challenges might they pose for governments?
