

UNIVERSITY OF BIRMINGHAM

Exploring Minority Ethnic Doctors' Career Transitions in Medicine: a Life Course Approach

Minority Ethnic Doctors Invited to be Interviewed for a National Research Study

We are a team from the University of Birmingham and Aston University conducting research on how ethnicity impacts on how minority ethnic doctors progress through the stages of a medical career in the UK.

We would like to hold confidential interviews with minority ethnic medical doctors currently practising medicine in the UK, who were trained in the UK or overseas, who are at any career stage, and from any medical specialty. The interviews will explore their medical career in the UK.

Interviews will normally last about an hour and can be conducted face-to-face, on the phone or online (Teams or Zoom).

We will be interviewing doctors from February to July 2024.

The findings from this study will be used to raise awareness of the enablers and constraints to the career progression of minority ethnic doctors and to improve the career support offered to them.

If you are interested in finding out more or in participating, please contact Dr. Ashok Patnaik on a.patnaik@bham.ac.uk or 07974872181.

You can also find out more about the project on <https://www.birmingham.ac.uk/schools/business/research/research-projects/exploring-minority-ethnic-doctors/index.aspx>

Thank you.

This research has been funded by the Economic and Social Research Council and has received ethical approval from the University of Birmingham's Humanities and Social Science Ethics Committee. The Principal Investigator for this project is Professor Etlyn Kenny e.j.kenny@bham.ac.uk

Economic and Social Research Council